

The earth is the Lord's and everything in it, the world, and those who live in it ...

Psalm 24:1

Your church family has been a blessing throughout your life, an integral part of your spiritual journey. But, when it comes time to complete estate plans, have you considered including the church in your will?

During her service on the endowment committee of Bon Air Presbyterian Church in Richmond, Virginia, Nikki Morris encouraged others to give to the church through their estate plans, so she felt she could lead by example. Nikki and her husband, Harvey, included the church in their will some time ago and she feels, "it's a no brainer and the right thing to do."

"I would like to build up the body of Christ and show thanks to Bon Air for the support of my family."

---

Jerry and Lorraine Quigg are also members of Bon Air PC who have included a bequest to the church. Jerry, former Vice President for Development and University Relations at the University of Richmond, understands the impact charitable bequests can have for the church.

"By giving through your will, you can make the best gift possible."

---

In Jerry's words, people can be reserved and therefore uncomfortable talking about estate planning; however, it's vital to discuss your plans for the future. It's your way of leaving a legacy and making a real impact.

It's shocking that 6 in 10 Americans do not have a will and fewer than 20% of those who do include a charitable bequest.

Like many who have given to your church over the years, you've probably been nourished and supported by being a part of your church community. It's a privilege to give back to the church that has been such a big part of family life. Bequest gifts have the power to impact future generations in the same way. It's so easy to include your church in your will and still provide for loved ones. You may be able to make a simple bequest by adding the following language:

"I give and bequeath the sum of $ _____ (or the % of), to be used for the general program of _____ Presbyterian Church, in _____, _____ USA."

A will is unique and must be structured to fit the needs and estate plans of each individual in accordance with the laws of the state in which they live. For this reason, you should consult a lawyer to assist you in drafting your will and estate plan.

You can touch the future with your charitable bequest. You may also want to explore other estate planning options, such as designating the church as a beneficiary of a life insurance policy or an IRA account.

Make or update your will – decide to do it today. We can help you think through your options to make the optimum decision.
